MESSAGE

The Philippines education system continues to face challenges in attracting new and maintaining regular attendance of existing children in school. This may be attributed to various reasons where poverty and access to affordable and convenient education system remain crucial factors. This is markedly true for the provinces of Masbate, Antique, Maguindanao and Agusan del Sur, which all belong to the 44 poorest provinces in the country. It is for this reason that the International Organization for Migration (IOM), in partnership with the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA), the Department of Education (DepEd), and the Department of Social Welfare & Development (DSWD), has implemented the education subsidy component of the Joint Programme on Alternatives to Migration: Decent Jobs for Filipino Youth, in cooperation with the International Labor Organization (ILO), United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF), and the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA).

The primary goal of the education subsidy is to contribute to increasing the level of school participation and retention rate in secondary education among disadvantaged youth, including children of Overseas Filipino Workers (OFW) in 15 selected public high schools under the Child Friendly School System (CFSS) in the target sites. The education subsidy benefits students at the risk of dropping out (SARDOs) and out-of-school youth (OSYs) who are not beneficiaries of or do not qualify under other educational support programmes which are often based on meritocratic academic record. This education subsidy adopts a more inclusive approach so that a greater number of youth will get the chance to complete high school education, without discriminating against those with average academic performance.

This publication documents the education subsidy scheme and its implementation experience and offers itself as a convenient tool kit which may serve as a useful reference for replication by governments in their public school system.

The success of this project would not have been possible without the commitment and unwavering support of the OWWA, DepEd, DSWD, all Partner Schools and the Local Government Units of the beneficiary provinces. To them, and to all the others who contributed to this undertaking, IOM would like to express its sincerest gratitude.
MESSAGE

The Overseas Workers Welfare Administration congratulates the International Organization for Migration (IOM) for taking the lead, together with the United Nations Country Team, composed of the ILO, UNICEF and UNFPA, in implementing the project, Joint Programme on Alternatives to Migration: Decent Jobs for Filipino Youth, under the thematic window of Youth, Employment, and Migration (YEM). The experience that has been shared by the implementers and grantees has been gratifying and encouraging.

The Filipino youth sector, just like the other sectors of society, has concerns which government has to address with responsive programs. We, therefore, thank IOM for designing a program that addresses the special needs of a particular group of young people – the students at risk of dropping out (SARDO) and the out-of-school youth.

The IOM project is indeed a giant step in helping bring back to school children of overseas Filipino workers in the poor provinces of the country, who for some reasons, have dropped out of school or are about to drop out. Through the education subsidy scheme, the target student beneficiaries are able to continue their studies and complete secondary education. With proper guidance and monitoring, they can even take one step further and pursue higher education. The empowerment and educational preparation that the program provides will, undoubtedly, help the youth land in decent jobs which is the primary value we would like to achieve.

We thank IOM for the partnership. With the active participation and committed support of the government agencies involved in the project, like DepEd and DSWD, as well as the local government units on the ground, we are certain that MDG-YEM will continue to be a success.
MESSAGE

My sincere congratulations to the IOM and the men and women behind the success of the Spanish-funded MDG-F Joint Programme on Alternatives to Migration: Decent Jobs for Filipino Youth, specifically the recently concluded second round of secondary education subsidy and orientation of the beneficiaries.

Such undertaking embodies strongly the spirit of “bayanihan”, “pagtutulungan” (teamwork, cooperation, brotherhood, and, partnership) to improve the lives of poor Filipino families, specifically the youth.

In the Philippines, the government recognizes that education is an area where the impact of poverty is easily manifested. Millions of school-age children are denied of education or are being pushed away from school due to poverty. It is for this reason that our government, throughout the years, continues to invest in education. In fact, basic education has the biggest share in the annual budget. With this magnanimous act of the Joint Programme (JP) that ensures that our Filipino learners will finish their secondary education, one big step to reach their dreams has been taken.

The Department of Education sincerely looks forward to significant partnerships like this, which DepEd considers as one of the most meaningful partnerships it has entered into.

Good luck to your undertakings. God bless!
Introduction
BACKGROUND: Helping Achieve MDG Goal on Universal Primary Education

The Joint Programme on Alternatives to Migration: Decent Jobs for Filipino Youth under the thematic window of Youth, Employment and Migration (YEM), was developed by members of the UN Country Team (i.e. International Labour Organization, International Organization for Migration, United Nations Children’s Fund and United Nations Population Fund) in support of the Philippine Government’s vision of a productive and competitive youth, and is envisioned to contribute to the attainment of the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) by the Government of the Philippines.

Among the aims of the Joint Programme (JP) is to increase access to decent work for poor, young women and men, through public-private partnerships, more inclusive approaches to basic education and life skills, career guidance, including safe migration, vocational training, and entrepreneurship.

In support of inclusive approaches to basic education at the secondary level to reach disadvantaged youth and improve school participation and retention rates (Output 2.5), one of the interventions under the MDG-YEM Joint Programme is the establishment of a secondary education subsidy for children of Overseas Filipino Workers (OFWs) and other disadvantaged youth in the JP target sites: Masbate (Region V), Antique (Region VI), Maguindanao (ARMM), and Agusan del Sur (CARAGA Region). This subsidy primarily caters to children of migrant workers (including former OFWs), who do not qualify for existing OFW education support programmes, as well as other disadvantaged youth who have no access to educational support.

The Education Subsidy component is being implemented by the International Organization for Migration (IOM) in partnership with the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA) for the inclusive school years of 2010-2011 and 2011-2012. Other government partners include the Department of Education, Department of Social Welfare and Development, local government units and partner YEM schools.

A total of 288 secondary school beneficiaries from 12 YEM Pilot Schools have received support under the programme for School Year 2010-2011. For School Year 2011-2012, this number increased to 450 beneficiaries from 15 YEM Pilot Schools.

For every school year, which consists of ten months, each beneficiary receives a monthly allowance of P1,000 that is intended to cover school transportation fare, meals, supplies, project materials and other incidentals. In addition to the monthly allowance the sum of P500 was paid directly to the school for every beneficiary per school year to defray the cost of other miscellaneous school fees, which would otherwise be collected from the student beneficiary. Under the program, all beneficiaries were also qualified to receive special assistance from IOM that could be used to cover costs of remedial classes, psycho-social support, and other medical needs. This provision is intended to address other concerns that may adversely affect the student beneficiaries’ academic performance.
Implementation

The implementation of the secondary education subsidy is divided into three major components: selection of beneficiaries, distribution of allowance, and monitoring of beneficiaries' academic performance. Throughout the implementation process, all partners from the national and regional government agencies, local government units and YEM Pilot Schools were engaged to ensure the smooth implementation of the education subsidy and to make sure that all necessary interventions could be undertaken promptly to prevent the dropping out of students.

The screening of applicants and selection of beneficiaries were carried out with the support of the localized Provincial Education Subsidy Committees (PESC) which involves representatives from the concerned OWWA Regional Offices, DepEd Divisions, YEM Partner Schools, Provincial Government, and IOM Field Coordinators. Applicants were screened based on their socio-economic conditions. Out-of-school youth, students at risk of dropping out, students facing financial difficulties and other disadvantaged youth were prioritized in the selection process. To ensure objectivity in selecting the beneficiaries, a Criteria Point System was established.

Selected beneficiaries were provided with ten (10) vouchers, one for every month of the school year. These were given to the students during the Orientation and Launch Ceremony conducted by IOM for each province. Invited in this ceremony were the students, their parents, school administrators, representatives from the partner government agencies and officials from the local government units. This is to ensure that all parties are aware of their responsibilities in the programme’s implementation. Each voucher is equivalent to P1,000 which the student beneficiaries present to their school principals every first Monday of the month. Redeemed vouchers are then sent to IOM for liquidation purposes.

For the whole duration of the programme, the performance of each student was monitored with the aid of their teachers, guidance counselor and principals. Quarterly progress reports for each student beneficiary were submitted by the school to OWWA and IOM to make sure that students complied with the minimum requirements set for the continuation of the education subsidy. The reports were also used to check if other forms of support were needed by the students which the education subsidy fund might address. In such cases, a formal request is submitted to IOM using the Request for Special Assistance Form.

Impact

The education subsidy allowed students, who would have dropped out of school due to financial difficulties, to go back to school. The lack of financial capacity on the part of some families to support students’ needs would mean that some students would have to walk great distances because they do not have the money for transportation; or, would fail classes because they do not have the resources to do their school projects and assignments; and sometimes, would deliberately miss classes because they do not have food to bring with them to school. These are the concrete concerns that the education subsidy aimed to address.

With the provision of the education subsidy, students were not only encouraged to remain in school, but were also empowered to do more than what is expected of them as students. The education subsidy prompted initiatives from the students to further enrich their well-being by using the savings from their monthly allowances to fund worthwhile projects. One school in Agusan del Sur initiated a Saver’s Club for the student beneficiaries who managed their allowances well enough so that their savings could be put to good use later on. This enabled the teachers and their parents to teach them lessons on how to save and how to value money. Another school from the same province also started their own small entrepreneurship ventures where the savings of the students were used to set up pig and poultry farms, the profits of which were also distributed among the students. This small profit-earning project hoped to add extra income for the students which they can use as additional support for when they pursue further studies after graduating from high school.

In addition, the subsidy pays off the school with P500 per beneficiary for miscellaneous fees incurred in socio-civic learning activities. Overall, the beneficiaries derive P10,500 each for the entire school year.

Challenges

Although successes from this project can be identified, challenges which are inevitable in any endeavor have also cropped up. One major concern of the students which affected their studies was the pervasiveness of problems within their families. Most common among the individual cases was the lack of sustainable income for the students' families. For this reason, some beneficiaries were hard-pressed to augment their family’s budget by contributing their monthly allowances which ought to be used for their needs in school. Taking into account this unfortunate reality, while IOM reserved the right to suspend or revoke the monthly allowance if violations to the terms and conditions attached have been observed, the students were allowed to be flexible on how they will spend the money as long as they meet the minimum academic and non-academic requirements. In very isolated cases, truancy due to lack of interest in studying were also reported.

On the operational side of the project, difficulties were also encountered in terms of the accessibility of the school officials for constant monitoring and feedback. The location of the schools factored substantially in this difficulty as they are situated in the poorest communities in the country where the transportation and communication infrastructure is least developed. This affected the timely response of the schools to the various reporting mechanisms set in place including submission of liquidation and progress reports.

Despite these difficulties, the education subsidy can be said to have contributed greatly to the performance of the students and the retention of those who would have, otherwise, dropped out. For some, it was also the opportunity which allowed them to go back to school and earn their high school diploma. The modest amount each student received monthly served as the bridge between them and their dreams of finishing high school. Upon earning their diplomas, student beneficiaries can now take advantage of the opportunities offered only to those who are high school graduates.

Moreover, the efforts of the students to remain in school were matched by the commitment of school administrators and other government partners to ensure that they do. This is manifested in the commitment of some government units to match IOM’s education subsidy by supporting the beneficiaries that will be enrolling in colleges or technical-vocational courses after high school. There were also promises for future employment.

Overall, the success of the education subsidy project is something that any project implementing partner can be proud of. Although the number of those who graduated due to the financial support given by IOM is really commendable, it will only be years after that the real fruits of this project will be visible, especially on the lives of the students and their families. It is for this reason that IOM is pleased to share the mechanisms and processes which propelled the implementation of this project. It is hoped that much can be learned and, therefore, replicated in other areas so that more lives will be changed.

ANNEX I

TERMS OF REFERENCE: MDG-YEM SECONDARY EDUCATION SUBSIDY

These Terms of Reference (TOR) form an integral part of the Project Implementation Agreement (PIA) between the International Organization for Migration (IOM) and the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA) to implement Output 2.5.3: the establishment of Education Subsidy, of the MDG-F Joint Programme Alternatives to Migration: Decent Jobs for Filipino Youth.

I. OBJECTIVE

To contribute to increasing participation and retention rates of the youth in secondary education in identified areas.

II. PURPOSE

This education subsidy is a pilot initiative offered to children of Overseas Filipino Workers (OFWs) and other disadvantaged youth in the MDG-YEM identified target sites who are unable to access to education due to poverty and its consequent effects. It primarily aims to prevent target beneficiaries from dropping out of school or to get them back to school by addressing financial constraints and helping address psycho-social hindrances.

III. TARGET BENEFICIARIES & SITES

This educational subsidy shall benefit the children of OFWs and other disadvantaged youth aged 15-24 who are presently residents of Antique, Masbate, Agusan del Sur and Maguindanao. They must be either out of school youth (OSY) or students-at-risk of dropping out (SARDO) from high school based on the following criteria:

A. Children of OFWs – shall refer to children of OFWs and former OFWs, regardless of OWWA membership. The relationship of the applicant to the OFW (or former OFW) will be established by OWWA. The applicant must not be a recipient of any form of scholarship award or educational subsidy and must not qualify under existing OFW education support programmes. Priority will be given to children whose OFW parents are deceased, disabled or suffering medical conditions or have been displaced or are in distress, or are in low paying jobs or are victims of abuse, illegal recruitment and human trafficking;

B. Other disadvantaged youth – shall include those in situations of extreme poverty, child labour (including child soldiers), forced labour, malnutrition, special medical & physical conditions, forced migration (arising from natural or man-made disasters, armed conflict, etc.), early pregnancy, single parenthood, victims of sexual abuse, or those suffering from parental problems (such as parental alcoholism, chronic gambling, etc).
IV. COVERAGE

The education subsidy shall comprise of the following:

A. A fixed amount of no more than P 500.00 per year for school-related fees and miscellaneous expenses as authorized by the Department of Education;
B. A fixed monthly allowance of P 1,000.00 to cover school transportation fare, meals, supplies, project materials and other incidentals;
C. Other support costs for special needs (e.g. psycho-social support, remedials, etc.) to prevent SARDOs from dropping out of high school and prepare OSYs to go back to school.

Provision of these benefits may be extended in part or in full, depending on assessment of applications by the Education Subsidy Committee (ESC). This coverage does not preclude other forms of assistance within the framework of the education subsidy, subject to the assessment of the ESC and outstanding balance of funds.

V. ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA

The educational subsidy is open to children of OFWs and other disadvantaged youth who satisfy the following general qualifying requirements:

1. Filipino Citizen
2. 15 to 24 years of age
3. Elementary school graduate
4. Child of an OFW (including former OFW) or other disadvantaged youth
5. Out-of-school youth (OSY) or student at risk of dropping out (SARDO)
6. Resident of any of the four Joint Programme target sites (Masbate, Antique, Agusan del Sur, Maguindanao)
7. Not a recipient of any educational assistance by any private or public institution.

Previous beneficiaries of the MDG-YEM Secondary Education Subsidy for SY 2010-2011, who are still in secondary school, shall remain as recipients of the monthly allowance for SY 2011-2012 provided that they have not violated any of the terms and conditions of the Secondary Education Subsidy as stated in the Acceptance and Commitment Form (please see Annex C) and continue to be eligible to receive the monthly allowance.

2. 1x1 ID Pictures (2 copies)
3. Birth Certificate from NSO or Certification from Local Civil Registrar. In the absence of proof of identification, Affidavit of Two Disinterested Persons

5. For SARDO, Certification issued by School Principal
6. Form 138 (report card) or its equivalent
7. Barangay Certification of residency

Where necessary, OWWA will secure other references such as case study report from P/MSWDO for OSYs or Family, Individual, Community, School (FICS) analysis tool for SARDOs following appropriate protocols.

The inclusion of state-run trade-oriented high schools in the identified sites may also be considered to enable beneficiaries to complete their secondary education with a special thrust on trade skills acquisition, provided that the beneficiaries pass the respective requisite qualifying examination of these schools. This would enable beneficiaries to be eligible for skill-based employment upon completion of the programme.

Any other school in the Joint Programme’s target sites that shall have subsequent interest to participate in the education subsidy programme shall be subject to endorsement by the Department of Education (DEPED) and evaluation by the ES C.

VIII. MECHANICS OF SELECTION & IMPLEMENTATION
